what organs derived, p. 472*, 473*. Differences from thoſe of electricity accounted for, p. 475, 476. Anatomically deſcribed by Mr. Hunter, p. 481.

Tradeſcant, Mr. John, a lover of Botany in England, p. 82. Particulars of his life, p. 83, &c. His monument at Lambeth, p. 86, 87.

V.

Vegetation. See Muſtel.

Vengoline, an African ſinging bird, imitated by a young linnet, p. 254.

Veturian family. See Denarius.

W.

Walker, Mr. Adam, gives an account of the cavern of Dunmore-Park, near Kilkenny, in Ireland, p. 16.

Walſh, John, Eſq; on the electric property of the Torpedo, p. 461. His experiments on that ſubject at La Rochelle, p. 462. And the Iſle of Rhé, p. 464, &c.

Watſon, Profeſſor Richard, on the rays of the ſun falling upon the bulb of a thermometer painted black, p. 40.

Wilſon, Mr. Benjamin, his diſſent from the Purfleet committee, p. 18. His obſervations upon lightning, and the method of ſecuring buildings, p. 49. His account of the conductors at St. Paul's cathedral after lightning, p. 60.

Withering, Dr. William, his experiments upon different kinds of marle found in Staffordſhire, p. 161.

Wollaſton, Rev. Francis, his aſtronomical obſervations, p. 67. Deſcribes the ſuſpenſion of the pendulum of his clock, p. 77.

 There are TWENTY Copper-Plates in this Volume.

ERRATA.

P. 8. l. 6. for and r. before which.
P. 273. l. penult. for quam, r. quum.

The End of the SIXTY-THIRD VOLUME.